South Asian Art Gallery celebrates feminine power with an exclusive online show “The FEMININE in the DIVINE” featuring Seema Kohli, one of the most recognized contemporary Indian artists.

Ms. Kohli’s work is a celebration of the female form and energy – the source of the twin forces of creation and destruction. Ms. Kohli expresses her creativity through various mediums, including painting, drawing, printmaking, sculpture, mural, installation, ceramic, and performance.

“I read, I travel, I listen, I observe;
I am a thinker, a seeker.

In my work, I connect lines, hues, forms and words in a humanitarian quest. And you see it in my paintings, you can touch it in my sculptures,
you are a part of it in my performances.”

GOLDEN WOMB

“The spirit of The Golden Womb - HIRANYAGARBHA’, an icon of fertility is intrinsic to my artistic expressions.

The Golden Womb expresses the constant state of positive procreation, recycling of energies that function throughout the universe. Literally understood by me as ‘Golden Womb’ - that which is self-pervading, engulfing every single element and being. I believe that all creation has emerged out of the feminine aspect of the sun which is constantly celebrating through creation, sustenance, destruction, and creation again. It is the first eternal womb through which everything has emerged, sustained, and positively recycled.” — SEEMA KOHLI

“This work has been inspired by the Indian mythological form of ARADHNARESHWAR—Shiva and Shakti. It is representational of an amalgamation of pure consciousness and energy. In my sculptural painting, the hump is the bull and the udders of a cow. Every being I feel is an amalgamation of both yin and yang, positive and negative, man and woman.

Hence, crossing all genders. There is no conflict of gender here, it crosses all barriers.”

The Personal in the Mythological

Seema discovered her love for stories on her grandfather's lap. She heard stories of great warriors, of greater lovers, of the greatest men and women, of saints and faiths, of gods, of kings, of heroes. The folklore and its connection with nature soon became the fodder for her imagination and creativity.

Her curiosity piqued, she went exploring on her own to discover tales of Rabia, Shams Tabriz, Bulleh Shah, Shiva, Kali, Christ and Krishna. She studied various philosophies of the world and sought to understand their relevance outside the academic realm.

She found both solace and power in the divine, feminine energy. This expression of divine energy, couldn't be confined to a single medium. With paintings, sculptures and performances, Seema brought this expression to life, making use of vibrant colors, potent forms, and imaginative scales.

Her collective works embody energy, sensuality and a connection to the cosmos that leaves one filled with awe.

Seema
interweaves
myth with reality,
the traditional
with the contemporary.
